

The Game of Life Junior Game

After comparing this to the other Game of Life for older children, I thought this would be a fun and easier intro. The instructions were vague at times so we had to implement a few house rules. The goal is to collect 10 stars while moving one of four cars around town. The spinner is so cheaply made that it went flying off the base almost every time we spun it. I recall the original version that I played as a kid and it had a tab/pointer that clicked as it moved. This version has a printed arrow on the board and when the spinner stops, it points to the number. Not nearly as fun. Especially since the spinner falls off the base often. Most spaces on the board correspond with an adventure card. After picking a card, you have to either act out activities, sing songs, or lose a star. My son loved acting out activities ie baking a cake, sack races, being a spider etc. There are also places of interest to visit around the board iethe zoo, playground, water park. Each player is given 3 VIP passes. When you land on/visit an area you can earn a star. You can also pay to visit. The purpose of having and using money in this game is poorly explained in the directions. The game takes about 15 minutes to play. At the end my son said,it was fun but he prefers to play the other version. (which he played at school) BTW this game was less than 15 bucks at a local toy store. I wouldn't pay more than that.

I felt this game was a little too childish lack of a better word. I thought I would be closer to the adult version like Jr. Monopoly. My son is six and this game was way too young for him. Went out and bought the original Life game.

I will start by saying that my 5 year-old loves this game.She likes the action cards, the little cars, and especially the wheel that flies off when you spin it.We humor her by playing it but it seriously irritates me (a perfectionist) that each time the wheel is spun, it has to be readjusted (or put back on, depending upon how hard it was spun).The wheel is such a major piece of the game that this oversight makes the game incredibly high maintenance (especially is multiple kids are playing and have to be supervised so they don't try to spin the wheel AT each other!
